

Practice Management

Adam King and Louise Yale

What if you could speak to an attorney at any time for pennies a day?

Starting a Chiropractic office can be daunting. It may seem simple at first — just find a location where people can find you, buy some tables and equipment and look after patients! The reality of what it takes to run a real practice starts to dawn on you when it begins to be more than just making appointments and keeping the books. That's where a professional team of legal experts can come into play. Becoming a good doctor and becoming a good business person are two different things.

It isn't long before questions arise. What are the tax implications of my choice? Must I register this or that? How do I comply with the laws that regulate my practice? What ARE the laws that matter to me? What about identity theft? Is an LLC better than an S-Corp for me? What about lawsuits? What is the best accounting system for me? Should I sign this? How can I protect myself from that? How much does all this cost?
